

Abstract

The plug-in connection device consists of at least one plug part and one socket part, which can be connected together detachably. A plug insert or socket insert is accommodated in the respective part, wherein at least one of the inserts is configured for plug coding. Each insert exhibits electrical connecting devices which cannot be rotated relative to it. It can be inserted into the assigned part, rotationally fixed, in a number of rotational positions relative to it.

